

The field of artificial intelligence started as a university subject in the mid-twentieth century. Founding figures such as Alan Turing investigated the possibility of machine intelligence. In the modern era, AI includes deep neural networks and machine learning, driving technologies like self-driving cars and web search algorithms.